Murray, LeTourneau, and Johnson Earn Top Berths; Anderson, Neary Also Place

By JOHN KREBS

Football Coach Lloyd Peterson's barreling Bulldogs, ending their second season in the MIAC in second place with a 5-1 record, placed three men—Bob Murray, Phil LeTourneau and Kenny Johnson—on the official all-conference team chosen by conference coaches.

In addition to the trio of first team selections, two Branchmen were voted to second-string berths and three were given honorable mention. Recipients of second team honors were junior tackle Jim Anderson and senior halfback Bernie Neary.

Tackle Jim Matteson and halfback Jerry Novack were given honorable mention along with guard Chuck Jeronimus, who has been out of action since September because of a knee injury.

BOB MURRAY, End

"I am very happy to have been selected," was modest Bob's comment regarding his placement on the mythical all-conference team. An honor graduate of International Falls high school, Murray was captain-elect of this year's team and last season was given honorable mention on the all-star squad at his end position.

An outstanding student majoring in business and economics, the 176-pound senior has attended UMD on a $2,000 scholarship and has maintained a high "B" average with a scholastic rating of 2.6. Standing a little over 5'10", the 21-year-old Murray is the only man on the squad who has attended UMD since it has been the Duluth branch.

PHIL LETOURNEAU, Center

A regular tackle on last year's Bulldog squad, 205-pound Phil switched to center this season and, in his first attempt in the middle of the forward wall, LeTourneau was a unanimous choice as the all-conference center.

Meet Miss Maxine Ammer

No More Blues at Torrance

Pert, dark-haired Miss Maxine Ammer might easily be mistaken for one of the Torrance hall girls she lives and works with. However, her M.A. degree from Columbia university proves to the skeptic that she is not an undergraduate.

Miss Ammer, a member of UMD's counseling staff, will help plan and organize student activities. She is also adviser to Torrance hall girls. Her former counseling experience includes that of supervisory hostess and director of the social room at Brooklyn college; social assistant and secretary in the department of religious counselors, Columbia university, and social assistant in the residence hall for graduate university women at Columbia.

She is putting her residence hall social experience to good use. Since she came to Torrance hall the girls have enjoyed several relaxing "coke" parties and have given several to which non-residents were invited.

Sunday the girls "showed off" their newly redecorated and refurnished lounge in an open house, from 3 to 5 p. m. Marilyn Granger, chairman, headed the planning committee.

AT ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL

K-P Club Supervises Handicraft Projects

Every Tuesday afternoon, between the hours of 3:00 p. m. to 5:00 p. m., members of the Kindergarten-Primary club spend their time at St. Luke's hospital.

At this time they supervise the handicraft projects of the children in Pediatrics and in the Polio ward.

Various handicraft activities are engaged in by the children. Two projects recently undertaken among them were: making a totem-pole out of ice cream cartons and making a train out of pill boxes and medicine containers.

Members of the Kindergarten-Primary club who have been active in this project are: Nancy Anderson, Pat Anderson, Pat Bartholdi, Louise Bjork, Rose Jorgenson, Nancy Mason, Clara McKenzie, and Marilyn Sjoselius.

The Kindergarten-Primary club is a member of the Hospital Guild. The Guild is the organization sponsoring this handicraft project among the children at St. Luke's. It is a volunteer service.

Other persons in the city of Duluth also help at the hospital on Tuesday afternoons. Others help the project with their donations.

Officers of the Kindergarten-Primary club are: Ann Rossberg, president; Jane Rich, secretary; Joyce Storlas, treasurer; Joanne Hockaday, student council representative; and Louise Bjork and Clara McKenzie, co-chairmen of the hospital project. Miss Green is adviser for the club.

Student Art Auction Scheduled Wednesday

Christmas is nearer than you think and if you want to get the jump on the shopping problem, here is your answer. The Student Art Auction sponsored by Kappa Pi will be held in Washburn hall on Wednesday, December 5, starting at noon, with Herb Taylor wielding the gavel.

This event is open to the public and not just the Washburn majors.

Six More Students Named To Receive Scholarships

Six new scholarship winners, including three recipients of Greater University Fund awards, were recently announced by Dr. John E. King, University of Minnesota, Duluth branch, provost.

The scholarships are in addition to the Marshall H. and Nellie Alworth Memorial and the James W. Hunt scholarships under which a total of 37 students are attending UMD, Dr. King explained.

"This region affords no more profitable investment opportunity than in its deserving young people," Dr. King said. "An expanding scholarship program at UMD made possible by these and other gifts from far-sighted individuals or groups offers vast worth to this region, not in terms of today's riches but of tomorrow's values."

The Greater University Fund scholarships are awarded under the Alumni Freshman scholarship program, one of a large number of study and research programs carried on with GUF funds.

Barkers' Club Group Attends Clinic

Three representatives of the University of Minnesota, Duluth branch, Barkers' club, student pep organization, participated in a cheerleading clinic for Staples region high school cheerleaders at Staples last week.

Dr. Robert A. Pierce, UMD club adviser, spoke on "The Role of the Cheerleader." Patricia Holmberg and Patricia Anderson, both of Duluth, were two of seven guest cheerleaders who demonstrated techniques. They are UMD cheerleaders. St. Cloud State Teachers college leaders also participated.

The session also included clinic discussions on "How to Get the Crowd to Yell," transportation of fans to games and other subjects related to fan support of athletics.

Phy Ed, Education Instructors Added

Miss Leota M. Abbott, formerly of Bemidji, and Hubert M. Loy are two new faculty members here this year. Miss Abbott is assistant professor of physical education and Mr. Loy is a lecturer in education.

Miss Abbott, a former Marine corps captain, comes to UMD from the University of North Dakota, where she taught for the last three years. She received her M.A. degree from the University of Michigan and is working on her doctorate at the University of New York.

Mr. Loy is also working on his doctorate, at the University of Chicago. He earned his M.A. at New Mexico Highlands university. Mr. Loy has been very active in scout work, serving as district scout commissioner at Muskegon, Michigan, and head commissioner and program director at Camp Strongheart, Lake Tomahawk, Wisconsin.

Former Honor Grad Elected Bar Association President

John E. Coons, a 1950 University of Minnesota, Duluth branch, honor graduate, has been elected president of the Northwestern University school of law Junior Bar association, comprising all law students at Northwestern.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coons, formerly of 630 Wallace avenue, Duluth, and now residents of Arlington, Va.

English Professor Panel Participant

Miss Ellen Frogner, assistant professor of English at the University of Minnesota, Duluth branch, was a panel participant at the annual convention of the National Council of Teachers of English in Cincinnati.

EDITORIAL . . .

Let's Revamp Council

This week finds the Student Council discussing a revision of its constitution. One of the basic points to keep in mind when considering such revision is the fact that changes made now will by no means be permanent unless they are general and flexible, just as our nation's Constitution is general and flexible. As the campus grows and enrollment bounds, the student governing body will be met with ever-changing problems. Tomorrow's council may well find itself involved in many decisions that today's council cannot possibly foresee.

Therefore, let us hope that the council will choose amendments that will remove present weaknesses and inadequacies, and at the same time will provide a modern and streamlined governing organization for the 1970 student body.

In our opinion, these are the things that our student representatives should work toward:

A MORE WORKABLE ORGANIZATION

Measures should be taken to prevent the council's becoming unwieldy in number. Also, organization of business should be such as to eliminate unnecessary or irrelevant debate in the interest of a few to kill important questions which may be in the best interest of the majority. The delineation of a limitation of the number of times which one person may speak on an issue and the power of the president to rule out unimportant quibbling should be clearly defined.

COORDINATION WITH THE STUDENT

It is the duty of the council to represent Sam Student. Steps should be taken to let Sam in on it, to a greater degree, by extending the distribution of members; elect the vice president, the two secretaries, and the standing committee chairmen at large. Take measures to enhance interest in the council among the general campus population. Freshman orientation should include observation of the Student Council in action. Too, the council should do something worth publicizing once in awhile.

COORDINATION WITH CAMPUS GROUPS

More of a service should be provided to aid the clubs, and encouraging them to aid each other, in greater development. This can be done by encouraging greater membership, elimination of rivalry for meeting nights, helping them with publicity, and so on, as their needs arise. A club officers' problem clinic should be held once a year. A student director of student affairs should be created as a council position equal in importance to that of finance and homecoming chairmen.

In return for these services, the clubs should contribute to the school and the council. The sale of beanies by the Barkers' club and the sale of Homecoming buttons by Beta Phi Kappa are examples of this. Homecoming and Sno-Week functions should be sponsored to a greater extent by the clubs, rather than taking up valuable council time.

All officers and committee heads should make an effort to gain greater cooperation with the administration. To paraphrase a recent statement by Edwin Wenzel of OSPS:

The administration is here to serve the students, but it cannot aid in their problems unless they bring their problems to the attention of the administration.

And finally, a word to Student Council representatives themselves. It is imperative that you maintain an adult attitude toward your job. It is not your duty to be a perpetual debator any more than it is your prerogative to be a proverbial bump on the log. You are not there because of your good looks. Rather, you are in every way a public servant. You are as important — and responsible — to the campus as the city council member is to the city, or the state legislator is to the state.

"YOUR CLUB SERIES—NO. 6*Frats Mix Social Life and Services

By JOHN BRUST

Coordinating the activities of the three sororities and two fraternities here on the campus at UMD is the Inter-Fraternity-Sorority council.

Consisting of the president and two members from each participating group, this organization, formed in 1949, sets down certain rules and regulations which govern the activities of the fraternities and sororities. Insisting upon conformance to University rules, the council advises the member groups of what they may and may not do in the field of rushing, social parties, and other sorority and fraternity events.

Under the leadership of this year's president, Jean Ott, the IFS council has completed arrangements for the initiation of a scholarship fund to be set up by the fraternities and sororities. The eligibility requirements will be left up to the University administration with but one limitation, that the recipient cannot at the present be a member of a fraternity or sorority.

At the present, plans are underway for an active representation in Sno-Week, and a fraternity-sorority party. Through the co-operation and planning of the council, sororities and fraternities are aided in achieving a successful social life on campus.

Gamma Theta Phi

Up until two years ago, UMD officially lacked social fraternities.

A few of the boys, with an eye toward the future of the campus, decided that it was time to do something about stimulating the social life of the male student. This explains why a group of men with similar interests and ideas got together and organized Gamma Theta Phi as the first recognized social fraternity on the campus.

They had their first "rush" during the spring quarter of 1950. This pledge class, along with the charter members formed the nucleus around which the organization took shape. Their big event of that year was the first annual Commencement dance. The second pledge class came in during the winter quarter of 1951, with the third class being admitted the following quarter.

After the coming of fraternities to UMD, social events and activities have increased enormously. Though Gamma Theta Phi cannot claim the credit for all of this, they certainly can boast of contributing greatly to the building of traditions and adding to the growth of our college.

The coming attractions of Gamma Theta Phi, according to Jim Dow, president, are the activities of the fourth pledge class to commence with winter quarter. A "help-week" is included in this year's rushing program.

Beta Phi Kappa

Born on a napkin, and bred in the idea of service to school and community, the Beta Phi

Dream of Miami Beach Vacation Comes True for Eight ROTC Men

By HERB TAYLOR

The three naked bodies glistened in the moonlight. Along the beach, the pounding surf cast its salty spray far ashore, and tropic breezes wafted the saline vapors far inland. The three men moved leisurely through the water toward land, on what stealthy errand bent, no casual observer could say.

Suddenly, a beam of light stabbed the darkness and flashed across the face of the waters. As one man, the trio cast themselves into the surf a split second before the light scanned the area where they stood. Minutes later, the beachcombers had divided their stolen goods and were heading up the shore.

When they reached their hotel room, cadets Roulston, Leestamper and Taylor sat drinking the pop they had "requisitioned" from the cooler on the beach at the ritzy Cadillac hotel, and mused on the advantages of nude bathing—especially on an exclusive stretch of Miami Beach at 3 a. m. on the morning of departure for colder climes to the north. The passing auto which had nearly exposed their indiscretion was merely one of the hazards of the game, and the stolen pop was especially good.

It had been a memorable week-end. The men mused about the climate, which was torrid, and the women who weren't. They talked about the night clubs where the entertainers didn't bar any holds, and wondered who would flunk out of ROTC, and not get to hold any bars. They talked about Harry Brusell, whose parachute opened all over the floor of the plane, just because he pulled the ripcord, and about Les Nummela and Kent Larson, who enjoyed varying success on their blind dates. They did not fail to mention sleepy Marv Wick, or Al Diehl, the eighth member of the party, who carried the fifth in his suitcase.

There was also a brief spasm of talk about an Arnold Air Society convention, about meetings and official delegates and such, but all this was quickly abandoned in favor of sun-tans and women, coconut milk and women, jelly-fish that sting and women, the high price of liquor and women.

The flight from Duluth had taken about twelve hours, including stops along the way, and temperatures ranged from near-arctic in the air over Duluth, to definitely tropic on the ground at Miami. For most of the men, the trip to Miami had been a gradual strip-tease, as they shed blankets, boots and flight-pants, winding up with the minimum essential uniform. The average speed of 140 m.p.h. may not sound impressive in this age of rockets, but going from Duluth to Miami in half a day was like opening a door into another world for those on board who were making their first long air jaunt.

The eight UMD cadets, and the twelve men from Superior State, were a mere drop in the thousand-man airborne bucket that descended on Miami from all over the United States last Thursday and Friday. If everybody had as much fun as they did, the third annual Arnold Air Society conclave was a notable success.

There was a serious side too. At the official meetings, held at the University of Miami in nearby Coral Gables, the accumulated business of the year past was settled and plans were made for the future. The fourth conclave will be held next November, at Los Angeles, California. With a little luck, the present third-year ROTC class of UMD will all get to attend. By that time the graduating cadets of 1952 will probably be pushing second-lieutenant type pencils in Kamchatka or Yokohama.

direction of Eric Peterson. An important topic every week is the social calendar, under the direction of Gerry Cook and Duane Eichholz.

Another important man to this fraternity is Les Nummela, who handles intramural sports activities. The boys of Gamma Phi will long remember being swept up in the broomball game during Sno-Week last year. Plans include another scoring basketball team this year.

Placing emphasis on school spirit and service to the school, Beta Phi Kappa encourages its members to partake in school affairs. Student Council president Bob Leestamper, Class presidents Ira Burhans and Jerry Cook, several members of the STATESMAN staff, leaders in sports, music, and dramatics, and leaders in several clubs proudly display their Beta Phi Kappa fraternity pins.

This quarter's activities included the handling of Homecoming button sales, and the sponsoring of a "free record hop" in co-operation with the Delta Beta Gamma sorority. The Beta Phi Kappa Homecoming float, constructed in 20 minutes, was considered by its builders to be a winner, but evidently the judges could not agree.

And so with a bit of play and a bit of work, Beta Phi Kappa is proving through its contribution to the school and community that there is a place on the campus for fraternities.

Next Week: UMD Sororities.

Thanks, everybody, for all of the encouraging comment on my last column. I'll try to write a better one some day. The only regrets that I have concern my mention of the legislative candidatures. Every time that I deny that I am one of those office seekers, I am accused of imitating "Ike," and hope to get drafted into the job. If I give an affirmative answer, (to dodge such comments) I sound like Senator Taft, by campaigning early.

Speaking of saying the right thing at the right time, were you at the Gloria Dei Lutheran Church the other night, when Dr. Hanson, of our Science Department was explaining atomic energy? He dug out his last nickel, and held it up for all to see. "You would be amazed at the explosive power of this bit of metal . . ." he was saying, and at that moment . . . the stove in the church kitchen blew up.

E. E. Edgar tells this one on Thomas Edison. Shortly after Tom had opened his first plant, he noticed that his employees were in the habit of watching the clock. To the inventor who was indefatigable, this was incomprehensible. He did not indicate disapproval verbally; instead, he had dozens of clocks placed around the plant, no two of them keeping the same time. This led to so much confusion that nobody cared what time it was.

Maybe this can add some light to that mystery concerning the slight discrepancies in our campus clocks.

Calling All Coeds

By LOIS CONRAD

Even though you've stereotyped yourself as being the unathletic type, Old Man Winter brings a sport which everyone should enjoy to some degree. That sport which brings so much enjoyment is skating—or, more properly named, "Breaking the Ice."

As you look back upon your grade school days stop a minute to think of the times when the playground rink with its tumble-down warming shack held thrills galore. There you'd heckle all the cute little freckle-faced boys by pulling off their knit caps, chasing them around the ice, and, after a good long chase, you'd finally dump them into a snow bank. Or was it just the other way around—the boys dumping the girls!

After zig-zagging back and forth across the rink about 50 times in a good game of "Crack the Whip," you'd exhaustedly crawl back into the shack to stand around the glowing potbellied stove for a good gossip session; one which almost reminded you of gatherings in the old pioneer day tales.

The lights would blink just as you'd be putting on your damp mitts for a try at fancy skating. You know, the type of skating in which you'd whirl until you felt like you'd just been clunked over the head. "Shooting the Duck" also comes under this heading of fancy skating but instead of shooting the duck, you'd usually feel as if you'd been shot yourself. Then, just as you're about to leave, the "Flying Dutchman" would suddenly descend upon your mind as being the utmost trick of the figure skating profession and of course you would just have to try it. But, after about ten unsuccessful tries, you'd finally decide to stay on the amateur side of the skating world and head for the shack once again as the lights would blink the final warning for all those under 15 years of age.

It would be 8:45 as you'd pull off the last of your five pair of long wool socks and pull out of the scads of rummage your two boots. Of course you'd never fail to discover upon returning home that you'd grabbed one of your own boots and another at least two sizes too small belonging to whom?—you didn't know.

However, you knew the evening had been a terrific success as you sleepily crawled into bed and awaited patiently the next night when the kids would call with the cheerful greeting, "Let's Break the Ice" again tonight."

NOTICE

All students, faculty members and staff who did not receive an X-ray on November 13-14 can get an X-ray on December 5, when the Chest X-ray unit will be on campus. It will be located between Main and the Lab School from 9 a. m. to noon, and from 1 p. m. until 3:30 p. m.

Faculty Members Attend Meet

Two faculty members from the University of Minnesota, Duluth branch—Maxine E. Ammer, student counselor, and E. B. Wenzel, senior counselor, attended a three-day conference for college student counselors at the University of Minnesota.

Meetings, conducted in the University's Center for Continuation Study, covered college adjustment, group dynamics, placement, vocational-educational adjustment, social adjustment, dormitory and student activities problems. Visiting lecturers and University professors led the sessions.

You probably know older people with enough money to retire. Most of them had the foresight to begin saving when they were young.

To have the habit of saving, and to own a life insurance policy, is always a good point in your favor later on when you are looking for a job. It indicates a sense of responsibility.

Congratulations are in order for eight UMD gridders who were given recognition as among the best in the MIAC. Captain Bob Murray, li'l Phil LeTourneau and Kenny Johnson made the first team of the all-conference selections, while UJ Anderson and Bernie Neary were chosen as second team members.

Jim Matteson, Jerry Novack and Chuck Jeronimus received honorable mention on the squad. It was a fine gesture on behalf of the coaches who selected the team to give Jeronimus honorable mention inasmuch as he played in but one conference game. A severe knee injury kept the senior guard out of action since UMD's first league game against Augsburg.

ANYTHING GOES . . .

Basketball is slowly working its way into the spotlight and will begin here tomorrow night when Coach Joe Gerlach's basketballers entertain Bemidji State's quintet at the Armory . . . The Armory is located at 13th Ave. E., and London Road . . . Admission—activity card only . . . Season tickets for all home games are only four bucks . . . That entitles the bearer to 10 and possibly 12 contests, which would otherwise cost $1.25 a piece . . . The athletic department is sending out over 4000 letters in an attempt to get the public interested . . . Maybe they should send 4000 to YOU in order to get YOU interested . . .

Hamline seems to have come up with another great team. In their opener last Saturday, the Pipers walloped North Dakota, 94-62 . . . Their starting five averages 6'5" . . . Included in the starting quintet is Tommy Richardson, all-stater from Gilbert last year . . . He's the shortest starter at 6-2½, while forward Jim Fritsche is the tallest at 6-8 . . . Bill Simonovich, Richardson's all-state teammate of 1951, is also attending Hamline, although he isn't a starter — as yet . . . They claim Simonovich is still growing and now hovers near the 6-foot, 11-inch mark . . . Over the last four years, Hamline has won 112 and lost only 11, three of the setbacks coming at the mercy of the Phillips' 66 Oilers, a top amateur team.

Darrell Lassila, fifth-sized halfback for Esko high school, has won all-state honors for his outstanding play . . . Lassila, a senior, has played on an unbeaten team that has won 20 consecutive games and has captured the Polar league title four years running . . . Austin high's fabulous twins, Dale and Don Rasmussen, also were placed on the all-state team . . . They may well be remembered for their outstanding play in last year's state b-ball tourney . . .

KEN JOHNSON, Fullback

A sophomore scholastically but a junior in athletic competition, Kenny was overwhelmingly voted as the MIAC's number one fullback. An able passer, plunger and punter, the 6-foot, 203-pound Duluth Central graduate was one of the most versatile backs in the conference.

Another former Duluth Junior college athlete, Kenny is a native son of Ely, Minn., majoring in business.

In his two years as a Bulldog regular, Johnson has tallied 48 points on eight TDs. An indication of Kenny's prowess is that two of his counters have come on runs through center of 74 and 44 yards.

Bulldogs Entertain Bemidji; Travel to Mankato Wednesday

By DWANE GANYO

Coach Joe Gerlach gives UMD and Duluth area fans their first chance to see the '51-'52 Bulldogs of the basketball court in action tomorrow night at the armory against last year's Teacher's college champions from Bemidji State.

The schedule makers gave the Bulldogs a tough one for the opener when they picked on the Beavers from Bemidji. They have eight of the ten lettermen back from last year's team, which lost four games and was edged by Hamline, 49-45, in a playoff for the right to represent Minnesota at Kansas City.

Bemidji this season has such men as the well-known former Minnesota athletic threat, Dick Lawrence; Blackie St. John, who was a forward on Bemidji's last state high school champs and Hub Hovland, STC all-conference fullback.

Gerlach has only three lettermen back from last year's fifth-place team and only one of these, Norm Schroeder, is a senior.

The other two lettermen — John McKeag and Bruce Paulson — are only sophomores. All in all, Coach Gerlach is carrying only two seniors and two juniors on the squad, all the rest being sophomores and freshmen.

If something is going to hold the Bulldogs back, it is their lack of rebounding height and, for a time, inexperience.

UMD's starting lineup will go something like this:

Forwards — 6'3" sophomore Bruce Paulson (letterman), 5'-10" freshman Mel Koivisto, who played for Esko high school.

Center—6'2" sophomore John McKeag (letterman).
